5 Live

Hot tips on this weekend's coolest concerts

The Handsome Public Rogue-Pop Video Meltdown

8 o'clock tonight, Galapagos Art Space (70 N. Sixth St., Brooklyn, 718-384-4586)

The wily duo with guitar, mikes and synthesizer mixes teen-friendly beats with subversive lyrics. Then they whip out a giant screen and make you feel like you're a part of their music video.

Ivy

9 o'clock tonight, Bowery Ballroom (6 Delancey St., 212-533-2111)

New Jersey's Fountains of Wayne love hot moms so much (particularly "Stacy's Mom"), that Fountains songwriter Adam Schlesinger started a side band with one, Dominique Durand.

Backdoormen

11:30 tonight, Mercury Lounge (217 E. Houston St., 212-260-4700)

Unlike newbie Swedish garage-rock bands, the Backdoormen (named after the lyric popularized by the Doors) have played blues-inspired mod rock for almost 20 years. And they have the haircuts to prove it.

Anthony Molina (Mercury Rev) DJ Set

9 p.m. tomorrow, Corner Billiards Bar (110 E. 11th St., 212-995-1314)

Chief of Mercury Rev - the spacey, on-again, off-again Buffalo band - offers a glimpse into what inspires him. Hint: the guy's into everything from Latin rock to jazz to spoken-word records.

Alter Egos

After midnight tomorrow, Blue Note (131 W. Third St., 212-475-0049)

New York's own hip-hop/soul/jazz collective has a deep understanding of its roots. Members studied at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music and New School University's jazz program. No funk-faking here.
